EDITOR'S LETTER

SAVANNA DUTCHER
Marketing Director
18th Force Support Squadron

As the island heats up for the peak of summer, we hope you are finding plenty of ways to stay cool, soak up the sunshine and enjoy everything Okinawa has to offer.

July in Okinawa is all about sunny beach days, warm ocean water and nonstop summer adventures. Temperatures regularly climb into the upper 80s, and the island's tropical humidity means it is officially the season for paddleboarding, snorkeling, swimming and chasing sunsets by the water. While July also kicks off peak typhoon season, bringing the occasional rainy day and strong winds, summer in Okinawa still shines with festivals, fireworks, outdoor events and the laid-back island energy that makes this place so special.

In this month's issue of Venture, we are diving into the history and tradition of Sabani boats and how they continue to sail Okinawan waters today. We are also taking a closer look at Freedom Fest, one of the biggest celebrations of the year, and sharing practical tips for finding employment opportunities while living on the island.

Summer fun is happening all across Kadena this month. Celebrate World Aquatics Day at Kadena Marina with special rental rates on paddleboards, kayaks and jet skis, or cool off at the shark-themed Chomp and Splash pool party and movie night at Hagerstrom Pool. Recreation members can also close out summer in style during the Youth Center's End-of-Summer Pool Party at Fairchild Pool.

For those looking to stay active, July is packed with events and friendly competition. Kick off Independence Day at the Fourth of July 5K, then grab your boots for Country Night Line Dancing on July 31. Gamers will not want to miss the Kadena Championship Series 2026 Grand Finale and Award Ceremony, featuring six esports tournaments and more than $4,000 in prizes and giveaways.

Whether you are out on the water, exploring island traditions or making memories with friends and family, we hope this issue inspires you to fully embrace summer in Okinawa. Stay safe, stay cool and enjoy every sun-soaked moment.

Best,

COMMAND

Life After Landing

Okinawa Edition

Photography: Marina Chayka
Article: Diana López Hansen

If you've been on Okinawa for more than five minutes, you've probably heard someone say, "You should get a government job." Easier said than done, right? The good news is that landing a civilian position on base isn't some mysterious insider process. Once you understand how it works, it becomes much more manageable.

First stop: usajobs.gov

This is the main hiring portal for most U.S. federal civilian positions overseas, including many roles on Kadena Air Base. Create a profile, upload your resume and start browsing. One important difference from typical civilian jobs is the resume format. Federal resumes are usually longer and more detailed. Include specific duties, accomplishments and even hours worked per week. The system scans for keywords, so tailoring your resume to match the job announcement can help you pass the initial screening.

If the federal resume format feels overwhelming, there's help available right on base. The Military & Family Readiness Center (M&FRC) offers workshops and one-on-one support for federal resumes and applications. They know exactly what hiring managers look for and can help you translate your experience into the style that works best for government jobs.

Another factor to understand is hiring preference. Some overseas positions give priority to certain applicants. Military spouse preference can place eligible spouses at the top of the candidate pool for certain jobs, while veterans' preference gives qualifying veterans extra points in the hiring process. These preferences don't guarantee a job, but they can improve your chances of being referred to the hiring manager. If you qualify, make sure the correct documents—such as a copy of orders or marriage certificate—are uploaded to your profile.

Finally, be patient. Federal hiring is known for moving slowly, and it's normal for weeks to pass before hearing back. But once you're in, government jobs offer stability, solid benefits and the unique opportunity to build a career while living in Okinawa.

Sabani

Article by Lydia Rothstein | Photograpy by Marina Chayka

Surrounded by ocean, Okinawa's history has always been tied to the sea. Before modern ferries, bridges and highways, communities relied on traditional wooden boats known as sabani to travel, fish and transport goods. These boats remain one of the most recognizable symbols of Okinawa's maritime heritage.

At first glance, a sabani may appear simple when comparing its narrow wooden frame to the modern boats found in Okinawan harbors today. But every part of its design was shaped by generations of knowledge and experience on the water. Crafted to navigate shallow reefs, changing currents and the unpredictable weather conditions surrounding the Ryukyu Islands, sabani were suited to life in Okinawa.

For centuries, these boats were crucial to island life. During the era of the Ryukyu Kingdom, Okinawa prospered as a center of trade and cultural exchange between Japan, China and Southeast Asia. While larger ships carried goods across longer distances, sabani connected local communities with transporting passengers, supplies and catches from one island to another.

Fishing was at the heart of that relationship. Before large commercial vessels became common, local fishermen headed out in sabani to reach nearby fishing grounds. The boats were light, nimble and capable of reaching quaint areas that larger vessels could not. Knowledge of the sea, weather and boatbuilding was often passed from parent to child, creating traditions across generations. For many families, the sabani was more than a boat, it was part of daily life.

As Okinawa modernized throughout the twentieth century, motorized boats gradually replaced traditional wooden vessels. Harbors changed, transportation became faster and many of the skills needed to build sabani became less common. Yet the boats themselves never disappeared from Okinawan culture.

Sabani can be found at cultural festivals and traditional boat races, celebrating not only the boats themselves but also the generations of workmanship and marine knowledge behind them. Watching a sabani coast in the ocean offers a glance into an era when travel depended on the wind, the tides and deep insight of the sea.

These boats represent the resourcefulness of island communities that learned to work with the ocean, the connections between Okinawa's islands and the people who called them home. While modern boats may have taken over the practical role the sabani once filled, its place in Okinawan culture remains strong.

Like many traditions in Okinawa, the sabani is evidence that the sea is not just something that simply surrounds the islands but rather emphasizes its existence as a pathway, a livelihood and an important part of the Okinawan way of life.

Freedom Fest 2026

Brings Summer Fun, Fireworks and Family Entertainment to Kadena Air Base!

Article by Savanna Dutcher

Celebrate America's spirit this summer at Freedom Fest 2026 on Thursday, July 2, from 5 to 10 p.m. at the Risner Back Lot. One of Kadena's premier annual events, Freedom Fest delivers an action-packed evening of live entertainment, family-friendly activities, great food and a spectacular fireworks finale honoring the nation's enduring strength, freedom and pride.

Guests can enjoy performances throughout the night, including live DJ Stitch, a fire dancer and Haribow Double Dutch performances. Roaming entertainment, including FSS mascots and balloon and bubble artists, that will keep the energy going across the festival grounds.

Thrill-seekers and families alike can explore a wide variety of attractions and activities. Ryukyu Pro Wrestlers will bring the action to the stage with three live matches, while Kiddie Land offers fun for younger guests with a train ride, mini jet ride, swings, inflatables and carnival-style game vendors. Additional attractions include crazy karts, a photo booth, garden games, glow-in-the-dark bucket golf and an interactive water zone featuring water balloons, water guns and sprinklers.

Gaming fans can head to the Esports Mega Screen for rounds of Mario Kart and Guitar Hero, while those looking for a relaxing summer treat can stop by the free s'mores station.

Shoppers will also have the opportunity to browse products and handcrafted items from 18 marketplace vendors.

Food will be a major highlight of the evening, with 17 food trucks and 16 private organization food booths serving a wide variety of festival favorites and local flavors. Drink and Dash service will also be available on-site for added convenience.

The evening culminates with a fireworks spectacular from 8:50 to 9 p.m., illuminating the Okinawa sky in celebration of America's 250th birthday and a legacy of freedom, strength and resilience.

Whether you are coming for the live entertainment, family activities, games or food, Freedom Fest offers something for everyone. We look forward to seeing you there!
